

listened on his resuming the crown, in which his son, for the first time, presumed to disobey him, and could not be brought to accept of any other title, than that of The Most Faithful of his Subjects.

MORAL.

Fear God. Honour the King.

FRIEND.

FRIENDSHIP

AN ALLEGORY

A World, in purchase of a Friend,

Dr

A RICH merchant had an son whom he most tenderly loved. He was educated with the utmost care, but nothing was neglected to render him more accomplished. The education of his son being nearly finished, he formed a design to travel. "My son, said his father one day, consider, that amongst all

N. 3